

The Threaded version of the merge sort does very well overall especially as the number of elements to sort increases. If its less than 1 million elements though, there is little to no difference between single or multiple threads doing the merge sort task. external data.txt has output data this is derived from.